Wading-Pool Debated Instead Of Swim Pool

W. L. Bosworth Elected
Chief Of Lions Club At Annual Meeting

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

Following a year as vice-president and enthusiastic chairman of the children's work committee, W. L. Bosworth was named president of the Lions club at the annual meeting Monday evening.

Other officers elected were: 1st vice-pres., Alex. Eves; 2nd vice-pres., Jack Luck; secretary, Ralph Boag; treasurer, Frank Courtney (re-elected); directors, Dr. J. G. Cook, H. E. Lambert; tail twister, James Law; Lion tamer, R. C. Morrison (re-elected); Billboard editor, Dr. C. E. VanderVoort (re-elected).

Frank Courtney was named as a delegate to the international Lions convention at Chicago. President F. A. Lundy was named a delegate at a previous meeting.

The next meeting of the club, ladies' night and charter night, will be held at the Royal Simcoe

REDMEN TAKE CLOSE GAME FROM COLLEGE

The Redmen and Pickering College met in a "workout" game on Monday night, with the Reds taking a 9-7 decision. Few of the regulars on either team was playing, and the game gave an excellent opportunity to try out the second string players for both teams.

hotel, Keswick, on Monday, June 21.

Permission to place a swimming-pool or wading-pool in the new Lions club park between Church St. and Lorne Ave., if the firemen should so desire, was requested by Fire Chief W. W. Osborne, and the club promised co-operation if the plan should prove feasible.

"We have raised quite a sum of money but we have not yet asked for donations," Mr. Osborne said. "It has been suggested that we build a wading-pool instead of a swimming-pool, but the fire-

New Courtroom Would Cost $700, Expect Court Profit

P. W. Pearson Appointed
Court Clerk, Salary
Undecided

The cost of fixing up the present council chamber and relief office into a courtroom would be $700, Councillor A. V. Higginson reported to the town council on Monday evening.

The partition between the two rooms would be removed, a new floor would be put down, and the stairs repaired.

There was a letter from Arleigh Armstrong, barrister, offering to rent to the town for a police court a Timothy St. room on the ground floor of the King George hotel. The room had originally been designed for a courtroom, the letter said.

"I think we should look at the hotel room," said Councillor Frank Robinson when the cost of renovation of the town property was made known.

"George Muir has also asked that his property, the former provincial savings office, be considered," said Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales. "I think that you should look at that too."

"There will be plenty of cases for the police court," stated N. L. Mathews, K.C., clerk and solicitor. "The territory covers all the old riding of North York, that is, Whitchurch, King, East Gwillimbury, North Gwillimbury, Georgina, Aurora, Sutton and Newmarket."

Redmen Out-Hit Aurorans By 11-6 On Home Grounds

Town Council Present For Opening Softball
Game

Better hitting and better fielding brought the Newmarket Redmen a well-earned victory over the Aurorans at Stuart Scott school grounds last Thursday. The Reds converted their 15 hits into 11 runs, while Aurora, with 10 hits, tallied only six times.

Ivan Eves hurled nice ball for the Redmen and was responsible for a neat double play in the eighth that halted a possible Aurora rally. Except for two slips the local fielding showed to advantage, while an acute attack of butter fingers on the part of the Aurora fielders made the Redmen's hitting count for more than it was really worth.

But with all the breaks cancelled out, the Reds still took a win by a comfortable margin. Newmarket's sporting couple turned out to give the team a good send-off, and after a scoreless first inning the Reds replied to Aurora's single counter in the second with a four-run batting splurge.

Neff's two-bagger was followed by a homer by Bob Peters. Cunningham poled out a hit that landed him on third and he was followed by Burkholder, whose

"Robbed Of Self-Respect, Farmers Must Co-operate"

Importance Seen In Co-operative Movement In This County

Expressing the belief that York county, through its co-operative movement, will lead Ontario to a new prosperity, Agnes Macphail, M.P., was a speaker at the co-operative rally at Aurora on Tuesday evening.

Miss Macphail recalled that she had taught at Pegg's school, near Newmarket (Union St. school or school section seven, East Gwillimbury) only 18 years ago.

Telling of the transformation which St. Francis Xavier university is bringing about in the lives of the fishermen and farmers of several Nova Scotia counties, Miss Macphail said: "The province of Ontario has its St. Fran-

SOFTBALL IS OFFICIALLY OPENED FOR ANOTHER SEASON

Ceremony

L. J. C. BULL PRESIDES

Declaring that a police court is needed here and expressing surprise that one had not been established years ago, Magistrate L. J. C. Bull presided over the first police court session here on Tuesday forenoon.

Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd and members of the town council were present. Dr. Boyd welcomed Magistrate Bull and Crown Attorney J. W. McFadden.

H. R. Polson, assistant inspector of legal offices for Ontario, spoke shortly, declaring that credit should go largely to N. L. Mathews, K.C., Newmarket, for the establishment of the court here.

Mr. McFadden expressed the hope that high ideals would be maintained in the court here. Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales also expressed a word of welcome to the court officials.

Mr. Mathews expressed the appreciation of the local bar and of the public generally of the government's action in establishing the court here.

Chief Constable Tom Hall was in attendance, in addition to one provincial and a number of county officials.

P. W. Pearson, J.P., acted as clerk of the court. There were three cases on the docket. County Constable A. R. Crouch of Roche's Point had the distinction of being the first witness.

ADVANCE DAY TO THURSDAY

With the Office Specialty working overtime and Wednesday being a half-holiday, the Newmarket Citizens' Band have decided to hold their garden party on Thursday, June 24, instead of Wednesday, June 23.

The committee in charge of early arrangements report they are receiving wonderful co-operation from the different organizations in the town.

The R.S.A. Bugle Band have pledged their full support. The Lions club have requested that a table be reserved, and the town council, veterans, firemen and merchants are offering their assistance.

The fine weather of the last few weeks has converted Mrs. Baque's lawn into a place of rare beauty. A splendid supper served amid these lovely surroundings with a fine program of music should entice many to turn the key in the door and dine with the band.

One of the highlights of the whole affair will be the fine concert now being arranged at considerable expense, while the grand street parade should be another attraction.

With this ideal location and the great interest being shown so early, the band may indeed carry out their boast to stage the greatest garden party ever held in North York.

Dog Pop. Estimated At 250 By Commission Salesman

Pup Is A Dog When It Can Kill A Chicken, Suggests Councillor

Newmarket's new dog tax commission system is proving a great success, according to a report made to the town council on Monday evening by Wellington Curtis, dog tax salesman extraordinary.

"I have sold $105 worth of tags," Mr. Curtis reported. "I have only 25 left."

Mr. Curtis is making a door-to-door canvass, omitting, he said, only homes of old ladies and others who to his knowledge keep no dogs.

Licenses sell for $2 for males and $5 for females.

"A lot of people want a week or two to pay," Mr. Curtis said. "Others want to get their females looked after. Some get one tag for two dogs, some get a two-dollar tag for a female."

"What can he do with people that won't pay?" questioned Councillor Frank Robinson.

"He can lay a charge against them, in the police court," said N. L. Mathews, K.C., clerk and solicitor.

"It's never been done yet," said Mr. Robinson.

"It's the fairest tax collection we have ever had," commented Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales.

"One lady refused to pay for a pup," said Mr. Curtis.

"A dog is a dog," said Councillor A. V. Higginson.

"A dog is a dog if it can kill a chicken," suggested Councillor George Williams.

One lady said that there were two pups at her house but that there weren't any when I called there the first time," Mr. Curtis said. "The pups had been brought there in the meantime, she said. One man had a dog that he had recently refused to sell for $50. He had never had to buy a license, he said. I collected $5 for it."

"How many dogs would you say there are in town?" asked Dr. Dales.

"I would say 200, maybe 250," said Mr. Curtis. "You see them wherever you go."

"We should back up Mr. Curtis," said Mr. Higginson.

"I think so too," said Dr. Boyd. Members of the council variously suggested that three months or six months of age should constitute a dog for tax purposes.

"If you don't collect at three months, it's a pretty big dog before another license is due," said Mr. Curtis.

"Leave it to Mr. Curtis to use his own good judgment," said Mr. Robinson.

"I can't look in their mouths and see what age they are," Mr. Curtis replied.

Wheel Of Fortune Operator
At Mount Albert Runs
Into Trouble

Thirty dollars and costs or ten days for reckless driving was meted out to George A. Wilcox, Brampton, by Magistrate L. J. C. Bull in police court here Tuesday morning.

Wilcox, who had been released on bail, failed to appear. Provincial Constable Alex. Ferguson, Aurora, testified that he had followed Wilcox driving at 85 miles per hour on Yonge St.

His supply of cigarettes running out, Alfred Ford, Toronto, wheel of fortune operator, began to give dimes to lucky winners at Mount Albert sports day, he testified. Ford was fined $10 and costs for keeping a gaming house and his wheel was confiscated.

County Constables W. R. Hill, Queensville, and A. R. Crouch, Roche's Point, gave evidence.

Ford had been operating the wheel for 25 years, he said, and it was the first time he got into trouble.

A charge against Larry Flannigan, East Gwillimbury, of allowing a vicious dog at large was dismissed. The complaint, laid by Mrs. J. Castle, was that the dog had bitten her little girl, Edna. Dr. L. W. Dales testified that he had treated the girl's injuries and that they might have been caused by dog bites.

PUPILS CHOSEN ON CHARACTER

Norma Kingdon of Vandoni and Harry Osborne of Newmarket were chosen this week by their fellow students at Newmarket high school as worthy of the W. L. Kidd prizes for character and personality.

Both are members of the fifth form, graduating this year. Runners-up in the election were Gerald Blight and Helen Rose of the third form, Howard Boyd and Noreen Moore of the fourth form, Breta Adams and Ivan Atkins of 4C.

REDMEN GO TO BRADFORD FOR GAME TONIGHT

Will Meet Richmond Hill
Here Next Thursday

PLAY AURORA TUESDAY

The Redmen's scheduled game with Churchill here on Monday was rained out and will have to be played at a later date.

The Reds journey to Bradford tonight to take on the softball squad there. On Friday of next week they are scheduled to play in Aurora.

It is expected, however, that this date will be changed to Tuesday, June 15, as Tuesdays and Thursdays are the only days on which the Redmen are free to play.

The big game of the week will be in Newmarket, on the Stuart Scott school grounds next Thursday, when Richmond Hill will come here in their second game against the Redmen. The Reds lost their first Richmond Hill game by a slim margin, and are out for revenge on their home grounds.

SHOW HORSES ON SATURDAY

One of the outstanding events of the year, the Aurora horse show takes place on Saturday afternoon. The children of Aurora and of East Gwillimbury, Whitechurch and King townships have been given free tickets to the show for the sake of its educational value.

President Elton Armstrong promises entries of the province's finest horses. A farm team competition, open to the farmers of Whitechurch and King, is a special drawing card.

The jumping will attract great numbers of people from Toronto and other centres.

ISOBEL CLARK HONORED WITH TEA CUP SHOWER

A dainty color scheme of pink and white was carried out very effectively when Miss Margaret O'Flynn entertained at a cup and saucer shower for Miss Isobel Clark on Tuesday evening. The assembled guests surprised Miss Clark and sang "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow" on her arrival.

A dainty colonial nosegay, arranged by Mrs. Jack King, was presented to the guest of honor by Mrs. A. J. Patstone. After an enjoyable evening spent in games, Miss Clark was invited to serve tea.

A huge cup in pink and white topped the tea wagon and was filled to overflowing with gifts daintily wrapped and ribboned in pink and white.

Mrs. C. H. R. Clark poured the coffee at the beautifully arranged table and Miss Clark cut the bride-and-groom topped cake. Mrs. W. A. O'Flynn, Miss Barbara O'Flynn and Miss Wilmette White assisted in serving the 20 guests.

"Thar's Something In That Thar Pure Water"

Analysis Shows Water Relatively Free Of Iron But Council Doubt

TEST IS FOR IRON ONLY

Members of the town council looked at analyses of town water samples and doubted at the town council meeting Monday evening.

The provincial health department's analysis of three samples of town water showed more iron in the water at the old pump-house than at the new well, and more iron from a Main St. tap than at the new well.

A letter from W. B. Redfern, town engineer, recommended a thorough flushing of the town's mains.

"The mains have been flushed thoroughly," said Councillor W. W. Osborne, chairman of the town's water and light committee.

"This is not a complete analysis," said Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales. "This is just for iron."

HOLSTEIN BREEDER CLUBS COMBINE FOR PICNIC

Holstein breeder clubs of Halton, Peel and York counties gathered at Edgewater Park, Eden Mills, on Saturday, for a picnic.

A number of York county breeders visited herds in Peel and Halton on their way and arrived at the picnic grounds in time for lunch, which was followed by an address by W. R. Reek, director of the experimental farm at Ridgetown.

The afternoon was taken up by a judging competition, sports, and a drawing for three Holstein calves provided by the clubs.

"We should get a real analysis," said Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd.

The council expressed agreement. If there isn't excess iron in the water, there is something else, according to the belief expressed by several of the councillors.

Tax Rate Too Low, Declares Evans, Town Short Of Funds

Haven't Money For Necessities, Councillor Dixon Says

Entertainment of the South African bowlers who visit Newmarket on June 24 was the cause of a sharp debate at the town council meeting Monday evening.

J. O. Little, on behalf of the club, asked for a grant of $100. Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd favored the club, but others were dubious.

"I told the club that we would pay for the entertainment of the visitors at the Royal Simcoe in the evening," said Dr. Boyd.

"I wouldn't give a five-cent piece," said Councillor George Williams.

"It is time we considered some of these expenditures," said Reeve

Junior Institutes Hold Ach-

The annual livestock judging competition of the York Junior Farmers' and the Achievement Day of the York Junior Institutes took place at Richmond Hill on Thursday, June 3, with a large number of competitors in both groups.

The girls' work took the form of a display of articles made by them in their project clubs, "Dressing up home-grown Vegetables" and "Clothes - Closes," clubs which have been conducted all winter under the direction of Miss Betty Wallace of the Women's Institutes' branch.

In addition to the display, the girls also did judging work and gave team demonstrations.

The livestock judging competition was under the direction of W. H. Cockburn, agricultural representative, and ten classes of stock were judged at the Municipal

WELL WATER IS BAD

"A sample of water taken from a private well on Park Ave. was sent to the provincial laboratory in Toronto last week for analysis, and the report came back saying that it should be boiled before using as it is class D," Dr. J. H. Wesley, M.O.H., told The Era this week.

LACROSSE TEAM WITHOUT ARENA

"We've got a cracker-jack of a team, but no place for them to play," Frank Doyle told The Era on Wednesday. "I've never seen a more enthusiastic bunch of boys," he added.

For weeks coaches have been busy welding promising material here into a first-rate team. The boys have worked hard and are in good shape. Unfortunately there appears to be no arena in Newmarket available for their use.

The boys journey northwards tonight to play the Sutton squad.

COLLEGE RECORDS BROKEN

Breaking the college record by a wide margin, G. McKee put the shot 40 feet six inches in the track and field events at Pickering College on Saturday. Jack Bowser broke two records, 19 feet 3 3/4 inches in the broad jump and 10 4/5 seconds in the 100-yard dash. R. Moore broke a record, throwing the discus 97 feet 2 1/2 inches.

C. R. Blackstock of the college staff was in charge of the sports program.

SWIMMING POOL

There seems to be some doubt about the firemen going on with their swimming-pool project. It is pointed out that a large expenditure would be required to comply with health regulations for foot-baths, etc., and that a supervisor would be required. It is suggested that the firemen should build a wading-pool instead. If the firemen do not build a swimming-pool, no one will. The firemen have already raised a substantial sum of money, without asking any direct donations, and will undoubtedly reach their goal eventually if they keep on keeping on. Even if it were necessary to wait another five years, it would be a wonderful thing for the town. Every child should be able to swim and should be able to learn without going to a distant beach by motor-car or without bathing in a sewage-polluted stream.

Let's Not Give Up

The firemen have in hand one of the most ambitious and worthy projects that the town could undertake. Times are improving, and in another year or two it will be easier to raise money. The town council may be in a better position to help. The school boards might see their way clear toward sharing in the ownership of the pool.

We're Englishmen

As already said, everyone should be able to swim. You know the lines: "Though it's an English rope that bides for our necks, we all be Englishmen." Our point is that the English are a seafaring race, water dogs, and we should spend a good part of our time in a sea, lake or swimming-pool.

SIGNIFICANT OF VALUE

One of the significant happenings in this province of ours is the refusal by a town weekly, the Midland Free Press, of brewers' advertising which has appeared in other newspapers. The advertising purported to be published in the interests of temperance, but was, of course, designed to make possible an increase or the maintenance of the present consumption of beer. The Free Press refused to use this advertising because the owners and editors see waste and injury in the use of alcoholic beverages. The incident is significant of the value of the independent, local, owner-edited newspaper. Its decisions are not as likely to be governed entirely by profit motives as are those of larger business institutions. The owner or owners of a local newspaper mix with their fellow townsmen and feel personal responsibility for what appears in their columns.

No Suppression of Opinion

Now undoubtedly there are those who feel that other things need to be said on the subject of alcoholic beverages, for instance, as the brewers tried to say in their advertising, that more good can be achieved through individual restraint and self-control than through prohibitive legislation. Surely this is a legitimate viewpoint, and is entitled to find a place in the columns of a local newspaper. Has the Midland Free Press been mistaken in refusing this educational advertising? The owners, with their belief that the liquor business is harmful to health, happiness and morals, could not put themselves in the position of receiving revenue from such a source. We believe that their objection was more to receiving beer money than to the expression of an opinion, which they could easily have answered. If any local person were to send the same advertisement, as a signed letter, to the Midland Free Press, we are confident that it would appear in full, with an answering editor's note or editorial. The Midland Free Press is not suppressing thought or opinion, but it is refusing to sell its prestige to the brewers.

TO LOVE OR NOT TO LOVE

In an interesting article in this issue, J. R. Harrison, an Aurora man of ideas, argues that criticism of the Duke of Windsor's desertion of the throne for love is based on a misunderstanding of love. A man cannot choose to love or not to love, he says, any more than a man can choose or not choose to like classical music. Again: "Love does not spring from logic or cold calculating reason, but is just a fact in nature which cannot be explained on a rational basis." Is that true, or is that one of the beautiful myths of the novelist, or the movies? Is that just a widely taught untruth, and a cause of hasty and unhappy marriages?

Love Defined

Mr. Harrison says that love is to be judged by "the sacrifice it calls forth, not by the worthlessness of the object." That seems true and we can all think of illustrations. Samuel Johnson, who was greatly gifted with intellect and should have been able to choose a wife intelligently, married an extremely unattractive lady, according to Macaulay, but always referred to her as a "beautiful creature." Worthy or unworthy, Dr. Johnson loved her and no doubt made great sacrifices for her.

Love Controlled

There are plenty of Dr. Johnsons who fall and remain blindly in love, blind to faults and blemishes, but for every Dr. Johnson there are 100, we venture to say, other lovers whose love is based on intellectual appraisal and approval. This is surely the soundest sort of love and the soundest sort of marriage. We are told that "love is for man a thing apart, but 'tis a woman's whole existence," but even women, outside of novels and movies, usually fall in love with those who have shown an interest in them or those whom they have been able to attract. Although it is contrary to general opinion, we contend that woman is a reasonable creature, falling in love with a home-town boy and not with a movie star. She has pretty good control over whom she will fall in love with. So has the average man. We don't suppose that the Duke of Windsor will read Mr. Harrison's article, interesting as it is, but if he does we would like him to read ours too.

MOSQUITO CONTROL

The mention of mosquito control at a town council meeting brought loud plaudits from all citizens. The board of health did not feel that it was a matter for its attention, but did co-operate to the extent of asking citizens to spread oil on stagnant water. The council is looking after some of the stagnant pools about town and could also very well look after some of the larger bodies of water outside the town, within a radius of two or three miles. Mosquito control is an accomplished fact in many centres. Winnipeg was among the pioneers in dealing with this menace to summer comfort and peace of mind. But, for the most part, mosquitoes have dealt with mankind. They can be very annoying.

AURORA'S CO-OPERATIVE RALLY

The co-operative rally at Aurora on Tuesday had a purpose. That was undoubtedly to bring to the attention of the people of this district the growing hold which co-operation is taking upon them. There is a semi-co-operative store in Newmarket. There is a co-operative retail store in Aurora. There is a newly formed producers' co-operative, operating under provincial legislation, on the Holland Marsh. There are numerous co-operative study groups throughout the district, taking their inspiration from Pickering College.

Important Event

The program at Aurora on Tuesday was given importance by the presence of Headmaster Joseph McCulley of Pickering, as chairman, Mayor Dr. C. R. Boulding of Aurora, who welcomed the visitors; E. H. Clarke, Aurora, secretary of the Ontario Whole Milk Producers' Association; Agnes Macphail, M.P., and I. H. Hull, president of the largest co-operative organization in the United States.

British Institution

To get a little better idea of co-operation we turn to a new booklet written by H. H. Hannam, Toronto, well known in northern York county as the secretary of the United Farmers of Ontario. Mr. Hannam is a bona fide son of the farm, and, although a young man, has become one of the best known citizens of this province. This is a 64-page booklet and we haven't time to dip into it very deeply, but we learn, for one thing, that co-operation is a British, not a Scandinavian institution. It was in Rochdale, near Manchester, that 28 half-starved flannel weavers adopted the first successful co-operative plan. They established a co-operative retail store, and the secret of their tremendous success was the principle of dividing the earnings of the store according to the amount each shareholder spent in the store (not according to investment). The idea was, and is, that the man who buys most from the store helps the store most, and gets the most back.

"VICES VERSAED"

Not long ago we were writing about the mayor, Dr. S. J. Boyd, as the economist, and the reeve, Dr. L. W. Dales, as the suggester of expenditures. The roles were reversed at the town council meeting Monday evening. Dr. Boyd was suggesting an expenditure and Dr. Dales was saying that the time had come for serious consideration "of all these expenditures." As usual, they reached an agreement.

WHEN GEORGE ELIOT WAS A BOY

How times have changed! The smithies, meeting in convention in Kingston, report that there are few working under the spreading chestnut tree below age 40 and most are between 60 and 70. The trouble, they say, is that smithies aren't paid enough. It would look as though, few as smithies are, there are not enough horses for them to shoe. Now when we were a boy or boys (as George Eliot used to say) there were plenty of blacksmith shops but no smithies' conventions.

Oxen Too

At least, we never attended a smithies' convention, and we spent quite a bit of time in the two village blacksmith shops. Not many smithies have "an opposition" these days. Of course, there are conventions of sorts held around the forge, and weighty matters discussed but they were over this writer's head. He was more interested in the magic which caused the fire to flame up when the bellows were pumped, more fascinated by the shaping of the iron under the white heat, more amazed by the patience of the horses and oxen (plenty of oxen in Nova Scotia, and there was a special stall for trussing them up for shoeing in every shop).

Saturday Morning Chore

Horses did not need to be trussed up. The smithy could easily lift the foot he was shoeing into his leather lap, and under those circumstances there was no kicking with any of the other three. It was a not unpleasant chore of a Saturday morning to have to take a horse to the blacksmith shop. Usually, the horse had indicated the need for new footwear by going lame. Or perhaps winter was coming on and it was time to have the horses shod. When one was very small, one was just a little bit nervous about leading the horses. When one got older, one ventured to ride the horse bareback, with more or less success. On one occasion the horse, a cantankerous mare which occasionally showed temper, wandered to the side of the road and proceeded to rub the would-be rider off against a fence.

Smiths and Smithies

When we were very small one thing puzzled us greatly about the blacksmith business. The name of one of the smithies was in real fact "Smith" but the other's name was "Corkum". We gradually learned that there were a lot of other smithies who were not "Smiths". The complaint down at the Kingston convention seems to be that there are a lot of Smiths who are not smithies. We are afraid that the days of Tubal Cain and "the fierce red light by his furnace bright" are gone.

USEFUL STOP-LIGHT

The stop-light at Eagle and Yonge Sts. is doing splendid duty at weekends. The light stops the high-speed Yonge St. traffic long enough to let cars from Newmarket and Lake Simcoe slip into the line, and then gives Yonge St. traffic a clear road for a while.

An unusual thing is happening in Fergus, according to the News-Record of that community: "Four out of five people seem to be discussing the relief problem wherever two or three are gathered together on the street, in the homes or places of business." Looks as though the distinguished editor of the Fergus weekly should have written "two and three" instead of "two or three."

The Common Round

By Isabel Inglis Colville

"Something In Common"

We so often hear people say, "We didn't do that when I was a child," or "I didn't have this when I was young," that we take a last glance back at our own childhood to discover whether we, in comparison with the children of today, were but poorly equipped with the means of enjoyment.

Perhaps children of today have more ready-made sources of pleasure—the very little ones have kindergartens so beautifully equipped—there is the radio and the cinema, and cars have given the child of today a knowledge of his country which, save in exceptional cases, was not possible for the child of a former generation to have.

I sometimes think that just as too much soft food gives the teeth no real work and causes their early loss, just so the lack of any need of inventiveness in the play line today is a serious detriment to the inventive spirit.

A child today can go to the movies and before his eyes, live "Cinderella," "Little Women," "Anne of Green Gables"—he sees what he has read and dreamed of, whereas we, in our childhood days, in this country where no pantomime existed, had to read laboriously or, if the acting instinct was strong within us, we wrote fearful and wonderful versions of our favorite books and acted them.

Stage properties and scenery, not to mention costumes, might have daunted stouter hearts than ours, but, necessity being the mother of invention—why—we invented.

Maybe such scenery was never seen on land or sea, and what the costumes lacked in elegance they made up in color, but we did one thing well—we managed to fix the things we try to act firmly in our minds, and there they stay.

I remember my ambition at the age of eight was to ride one of those wonderful dappled horses in a circus and I wept for days because my hard-hearted parents didn't view my ambition with any great favor.

But, if I couldn't join a circus, well, there was just one thing for it, some kind of a circus must join me.

So, with some other folk, bitten by the same mania, after witnessing their first big show, a circus was planned.

Looking back, I admire now, what I took for granted then, the magnificent co-operation of the mothers whose offspring were begging, borrowing and demanding everything which might fit their needs.

The clown was fitted out with a wonderful white suit with green stripes up the sides of the white trousers; the riders were swathed within an inch of their lives; the trapeze artist costumes were made from long stockings and the unwilling dog, who enacted the part of an Arabian steed, was made unhappy with a multi-colored saddle cloth.

After long days of preparation,

we were ready, and the families came to be inwardly convulsed and outwardly admiring, while we did wonders—riding sticks with horses' heads, walking narrow boards, a few feet from the ground, sitting in a cage with some alarmed and alarming cats, while a bewildered cow was fitted with a howdah (in which reposed or five-year-old actor) and led about the ring with a wild look in its eye, and a decided tendency to bolt.

Our circus was a decided asset to our parents; because for about a month, we spent every spare minute in preparation, and the cry of "What Can I Do Now?" so disturbing to a mother's ears, was conspicuously by its absence.

We didn't have plasticine in those days, but we made wonderful structures of mud and ornamented them with fragments from a marble cutter's. It's a wonder some of us didn't turn out to be sculptors or actors, for we sculpted? (Is that a word?) and acted that whole summer.

We enacted Christopher Columbus discovering America; we were vikings, scouring the ocean; in a flat bottomed boat with umbrellas for sails—all this on the little river Tay.

It seems to me the chief difference between the children of today and those of yesterday is that the children of today are apt to be blasé.

They have seen as much at 12 years of age as we had at 18, and, indeed, far more for they have travelled thousands of miles where we had travelled hundreds—even if we had a few trips on the train—they demand more because more is spread before them.

But in the essentials—the deeper down things—I cannot see much difference. They build with mecano where we built with blocks and sticks; they go to the talks, we saw an occasional show, or made one. People said that when the radio came, music lessons would go; but as far as I can see, as many children, or more, take music lessons, as did those of pre-radio days. They still love Christmas and holidays.

But I still think they ask more, and the reason is not far to seek—they have been given more. I cannot see, as some people think they do, that so many more facilities for enjoyment and for education have made children essentially different, although we, who were brought up under a stricter regime, had a different idea of obedience.

Children of today are more self-reliant, and this, I fancy, is all to the good when one considers what they have to face in their fight for recognition, later on.

So, if indeed the children of today have much that we lacked, it seems they would fare badly without it, in these swift moving times, where every facility is not too much to give a child what it must have in the almost primitive struggle to gain a foothold in the world.

Goldie Wins A Romantic Battle

BY RUTH DINSMAN HEBB

"We certainly haven't been out much lately, have we?" Chips, the Chickadee, said to his wife, Cora.

"No, but of course, hardly anyone has among the birds, in June," she replied. "June is our home month. And the happiest month of the year, I always think. Everyone is looking prettier than at any other time of year and is singing the most happily. But it is not like you to be bored."

"Oh, I'm not," exclaimed Chips hastily. "Especially now that the children are old enough to play with a bit. When they are so very young we seemed to do nothing but worry over whether they were getting enough to eat. I'm glad they're safely started in life and that we're not just laying our eggs like our friends, the Yellow Warblers and the Kingbirds and some of the other slowpokes. But once in a while I do think it would be kind of nice to have the merry month of June to go around in instead of having the responsibility of children. Why couldn't we have our family later on in July or August? It would be nice and warm, then."

"Oh, pooh," said Cora. "You know that June's the very best month to raise a family in. It gives the young Chickadees such a nice long summer to build up their strength for the long, hard Canadian winter. And, of course, the other birds that migrate to the south want their children to be big and strong enough to stand that trip."

"I know Mrs. Rob Robin lost two of her second family during their long flight south, last year."

"There's another reason, of course, that this is the best time of year to bring up our youngsters, now that you mention it," said Chips. "Food is most plentiful now. The larvae of the insects and grubs is obtainable most easily now. Yes, I guess you're right, we do pick the wisest time to bring up a family."

"Hello, you two Chickadees," called a Goldfinch gaily as he alighted on a thistle. "How are the busy parents today?"

"Oh, you needn't tense us, Goldie, you lazy loner," replied Chips. "We were patting ourselves on the back for having our family half grown up already. I suppose you are still flying gaily about without a care in the world."

AMATEUR JOURNALISM

Recently I have been greatly impressed by a couple of wee newspapers prepared and read before the Young Peoples' Unions at Hedford and Temperanceville. As long as I've been acquainted with community organizations, I have been familiar with these little papers that are presented on occasion. But most of these were composed largely of gossip little jokes about local people. Victoria Square Junior Farmers introduced us to a new note when we visited them in the winter by including an editorial on co-operation and its possibilities.

Now come two serious young men with papers laden, in fact overlaid, with social ideas and ideals. At Hedford they stress world peace, a subject that they have featured in their study groups. Temperanceville, having studied consumer co-operation, runs its editorials on that subject. It is a tribute to the development of the people in these two communities that they are willing to receive this material attentively in place of the usual chatter. At the present time it is my feeling that our amateur editors would be well to balance their papers with a little more humor and variety to remove the risk of souring their public on an overfeeding of concentrates.

The editors of "Wise and Otherwise" and the "Temperanceville Tutor" show quite a definite evidence of literary ability. At least they should be able to write effectively anything in the way of ideas that their fruitful minds may produce. I would advise both of them to consider their local weekly newspapers. Through pleasant experience I can tell them that they will find the editors in their nearby towns interested in brief contributions. They might begin by reporting some local event that is news. It is unfortunate that many worthwhile happenings miss the press when there are so many readers who are not merely interested in where Mrs. So-and-So spent Sunday, or our young men might occasionally write brief letters to their editors expressing opinions on current questions.

There is in our home a book by a very clever writer who began his career by little contributions to a weekly in a small English village. It was not without much hesitation that I began my contributions to the local press five years ago. Despite its shortcomings The Furrow's End is now read by doctors, lawyers, the odd university professor and even farmers. There is nothing to prevent my young friends from doing likewise.

If I cannot appeal to Edgar James and Harry Rumble on the grounds of achievement and recognition, let me do it on the grounds of civic duty and social responsibility. All of us who are sincerely concerned about the progress must exert ourselves in the moulding of public opinion. Our young men should seriously consider spreading their light instead of hiding it under the proverbial bushel.

Lilacs

By Golden Glow

What a wonderful year for lilacs this has been! Never in my recollection have I seen anything to equal the bloom! Everywhere you go you see them! They are always so satisfactory.

If there is any one trip I love beyond another at this time of the year, it is the ride down our famous old road, Yonge street, where homes have been established for over a hundred years. Last Saturday morning we had occasion to go down and it was one long avenue of blossoming lilacs—every shade, from white to deep purple. And in the afternoon we went to the annual June meeting of the York Pioneers at Sharon, and Sharon was beautiful, too, with wonderful lilacs.

In a garden just south of the Sharon Temple was a tiny lilac of deep mauve shade, no higher than five feet, I should say, and you couldn't see the tree for the quantity of bloom on it, and it had quality as well as quantity.

When you see the white lilacs you think they are your choice of all the others, especially the double white ones—then you see a tree covered with the pale lilac-colored blooms and you think that it should have been your choice. Again you see a tree of the deeper shade, the Persian lilacs, and you decide it shall have first place.

Then again you see the late-blooming, immense blooms of the French lilac and again you think you have made a mistake, you should decide to give it first place. And so it goes—they are all so lovely you simply can't decide.

And now the Bridal Wreath is in bloom and the first of the peonies. The world out-of-doors is so exceptionally beautiful this year that we have no words to tell our deep appreciation. It is so wonderful after our terrible experience of last year!

Even the tent caterpillars can't altogether dampen our ardour. Soon the Oriental poppies will be in their glory—the iris have already started, and the lily-of-the-valley is practically over. The big ferns are at their best too, and fill many a corner with beauty.

The crab-apple trees have been magnificent, and the chestnuts, with their peculiar upright flowers, like candles on a Christmas tree. If England can be more beautiful than Ontario, and especially our wonderful county of York, at this season of the year, then I hope it may be my privilege to be in England some spring.

I still long to be in British Columbia (New Westminster or Victoria) at this season to see the Yellow Broom in flower. It covers everything with gold, like King Midas of old, who had the golden touch.

And now I'll end up with just this line of poetry—I may misquote it, and I've no idea who wrote it:

"Come down to Kew in lilac time."

"Do you think you can make a good portrait of my wife?"

"My friend, I can make it so lifelike that you'll jump every time you see it."

With her own funds, the wife purchased simple furniture. Tones of rust and were used in curtains and tery.

The boy who is attracted to the sea will be more than pleased with a bedroom that has a nautical touch. The mother who likes an unusual room has full scope here to try her talents.

The Dominion government's Home Improvement Plan clears the way for creating such a room which perhaps cannot be afforded. If a cash outlay is necessary, the structural work and the actual decorating of the room may be accomplished with funds obtained from a bank under the terms of the Home Improvement Plan. The loan may be repaid in small instalments.

One room was panelled and the ceiling was beamed. In the panelled wall a bunk was built, leaving the floor space free for the placing of other furniture. A wallpaper with a geographic pattern, brightly colored, was hung on the wall behind the bunk, adding a pleasing color note.

The remaining walls were painted a neutral shade. A composition floor covering, with a compass design in the centre covered the floor. A ship replaced the regulation fixture. With her own funds, the wife purchased simple furniture. Tones of rust and were used in curtains and tery.

Bethel

As announced last week, Mrs. Geo. Wilkinson, of Bethel, opened her home for the monthly meeting of the Bethel L.A. and Women's Missionary Society on Thursday evening.

Owing to some homes having sickness, a number who had been expecting to attend, were unable to do so.

The devotional part, led by Mrs. T. W. Huntley, president, was earnestly taken part in. Several of the men of the congregation were present, and led the singing.

After the business part of the meeting, the evening was given over to the guest speaker, Mrs. Wm. Pollard, a former president, who was pleased to again meet with the Bethel people.

Mrs. Pollard's subject was thoroughly enjoyed by those present. She spoke in her usual earnest way.

A vote of thanks was tendered the speaker, and to the hostesses, Mrs. Wilkinson and Mrs. Selby Fairbairn, who served a dainty lunch.

The first Sunday of each month is recognized as mission Sunday at the church at Maplehill, and last Sunday the congregation welcomed Mr. Frank X. Stanley, recently returned from Nigeria, West Africa.

In the morning there was an open session at the Sunday school, when Mr. Stanley gave a fine message, especially speaking to the children and showing some curios he had brought with him from Africa.

At the evening service he told more about his work in Africa and gave a splendid gos-

Next Sunday J. S. Eason is to be the speaker, and he needs no introduction to a Newmarket audience. Mr. Eason has been giving a series of lectures in the Masonic temple every Friday evening for months to a capacity house.

Wife—"Let me see that letter you've just opened. I can see from the handwriting it's from a woman and you turned pale when you read it."

"Making a better world" was the topic of the sermon at the United Church last Sunday.

"While there are forces trying for the supremacy of this world yet none has done more for the well-being of mankind as the gospel of Christ and the church, which is closely allied with it," the minister stated.

"Let us not be weary of well-doing," is the message of Paul which the church might well take to heart these days, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not. If we accept the challenge to make a better world it means service and sacrifice. In all walks of life we see many who have assigned themselves to this great task," he said.

Rev. Mr. Murray referred to the different arts and sciences, the many trades and professions which are making a world more beautiful but saw a calamity in these same forces being used for the destruction of life and property.

PERSONAL SERVICE

Some people are of the opinion that a bank is impersonal in its attitude toward clients generally, and particularly in regard to loans. Far from it. In Memoriam

Rev. Matthew J. Wedlock—Died June 11, 1936.
"He was a true Christian gentleman."
"We cherish his memory in our hearts."
—By his old friends.

McGhee—In loving memory of sister Nellie, beloved daughter of Mrs. A. McGhee, who passed away June 13, 1919. While the midnight stars are gleaming
On a lone and silent grave,
Beneath it sleeps dear sister Nellie,
The one we loved but could not save.

Her wearied hours, her days of pain,
Her troubled nights are past.
Her ever patient, worn out frame,
Has found sweet rest at last.

Long days, long nights, she bore her pain
To wait for cure, but all in vain,
Till God Himself knew what was best,
He took her to Him and gave her rest.
Ever remembered by Mother, Brothers and Sisters.

Wilson—In loving memory of my dear husband, Albert F. Wilson, who passed away June 6, 1933.
Four years have gone, how swift time flies,
Loves sweet memory never dies.
I miss his help, his cheery ways,
With him I spent my happiest days.
I miss him when I need a friend,
On him I always could depend.
He cheered my life, he soothed my pain;
God grant mine day we'll meet again.
—Sadly missed by his loving Wife.

KIDDIES TAKE TWO SERVICES

Plays And Singing By Children's Choirs Mark Day At Christian Church

Impressive services conducted by children were held in the morning and in the evening at the Christian - Congregational church on Sunday. The church was beautifully decorated with tulips, lilac and iris for the occasion.

Singing by the girls' choir and the pageant, "For every child," were very effective. The pageant was in the form of four one-act plays in which every department of the Sunday-school was represented.

The part of "Christian education" was taken by Mrs. Harold Hilton. The home-scene, the first act, included Mrs. W. B. Epworth as the mother, Bill Robinson as the father, Margaret Proctor and Johnny Breen as the children, and Miss Annie Watts as the church visitor.

Miss Edna Webster directed the beginners, who took charge of the next act. Four-year-old Jean Bennitz sang a lovely solo, and her classmates included Carol Boag, Alicia DeHaven, Patricia DeHaven, Lorne Wass, Dorothy Edwards, Ann Boyd, Douglas Bunn, Beverly Saunders, Bobby Saunders, Joan Bovair, Pauline Bovair, Pauline Proctor, Donald Brice and Johnny Breen.

The primary group, under the direction of Miss Breta Adams, sang well. Members of the class included Kenneth Edwards, John Duffield, Garry Proctor, Margaret Cross, Dorothy Bennitz, Orla Larsen, Blanche Breen, Danny Bovair, Betty Wright, Dorothy Sprague, Margaret Proctor, Beryl Climpson, June Bunn and Helen Epworth.

The final scene of the pageant was by the junior group under the guidance of Harold Hilton. Those taking part were Donald Smith, Earley Ruthven, Albert Cole, John Sheard and Harold Smart. The pageant stressed throughout the importance of Sunday-school attendance to the children.

Jack Groves gave a recitation and two members of the choir, Irene Tibbet and Irene Armstrong, sang a lovely duet.

Bearing cards with a letter and scripture verse, the front row of the choir spelled out "children's day." Members of the choir were: Irene Tibbet, Irene Armstrong, Betty Dales, Alice Londry, Ruth Pipher, Marion Klees, Helen Adams, Marguerite Brice, Lilus Bond, Hilda Pegg, Joyce Trusty, Merle McCabe, Marion Proctor, Doris Willis, Doreen Proctor, Edna Vaughan, Betty Watson, Gwenneth Smith, Miss Thompson, Miss Thompson, Doreen Gardner, Mary Ganton, Marjorie McCarnan, Margaret Darrow, Evelyn Travis, Doris Proctor.

Gert Larsen, Ivan Moles, Harrison Proctor and Gordon Proctor acted as ushers and took up the collection.

Arrangements were made by Miss Annie Knowles, superintendent of the Sunday-school.

GUIDERS HOLD GARDEN PARTY

Association Formed To Help Guides, Brownies, Scouts And Cubs

The Girl Guide tea is being held tomorrow at the home of Mrs. W. A. McCaffrey, 51 Lorne Ave., from 3 to 5 p.m., under the auspices of the Girl Guide Association. Weather permitting, tea will be served in Mrs. McCaffrey's beautiful garden. In case of rain it will be held indoors.

The fish pond, ice cream, talent table of candy and baking, and various other attractions will make it very pleasant to contribute to such a worthy object.

This local association, formed last week at the home of Mrs. W. A. O'Flynn, will assist not only the town company of Guides and the Brownies to be reorganized in September, but also the closed company already formed under the auspices of the separate school. When the Scouts and Cubs again become active the association also stands behind them.

The Guides and Brownies will be open to all girls of the required ages in the town, regardless of religious affiliation, and all churches will be represented in the association.

The ladies are working hard to have plans made so that the activities may begin promptly in September and the young folk may benefit from the full term. They will appreciate the support of the town in this work.

AURORA

HOLDS OFFICE

TWO DECADES

Mrs. H. J. Charles, secretary of the Aurora Women's Liberal association, was presented with a silver tray in recognition of her 20 years' service as secretary, at a meeting on Tuesday.

Mrs. Angus Gordon, press convener of the Ontario Women's Liberal association, was the guest speaker. Her topic was "Political status of women in the different countries of the world today." She stressed the advancement politically of women in Turkey and Poland and the apathy of Canadian women towards politics.

ROBBED OF SELF-RESPECT

of Pickering College was chairman of the meeting which took place in the high school following a co-operative parade, with 20 or 30 floats, and a display of Danish gymnastics in the Aurora drill shed. Rain delayed the parade.

Mayor Dr. C. R. Boulding welcomed the co-operators. I. H.
Hull, Indianapolis, president of National Co-operatives Inc., and Miss Macphail were principal speakers.

Others who spoke briefly included Ernest Clarke, Aurora, secretary of the Ontario Whole Milk Producers; Silas Vance, secretary of the United Co-operatives Inc., and V. L. Everson, Indianapolis, general manager of the United Co-operatives, Inc.

Winners of the silver trophies for the best floats were: Ace
Cook, Aurora, and the Aurora Women's Guild. The judges were Miss Macphail, Mr. Hull and Andrew Hebb, Newmarket.

Miss Macphail told of her visit last year to the Scandinavian countries.

"Denmark is a most beautiful garden," she said. "They have an educational system which puts the emphasis on how we use our talents rather than on the talents we have. They have come to the conclusion that success comes to those who put a lot into life."

"Ninety percent of hog producers process their own hogs.
The other 10 percent have asked to be admitted to the co-operative organization. The co-operatives enable the producers to send their best bacon to the British market."

"Butter is made from sweet cream and in two hours is in dated containers. There is a fine for tampering with dates. Eggs are so packaged that they can be traced to the farm, if not the hen, which produced them."

"Seventy percent of all needs of the farm in Denmark are satisfied by co-operatives, retail and wholesale."

"In Sweden, we found, farmers are not as well organized, but we found that town people have done much better than the town people of any other country. They have co-operative manufacturing."

"The pioneers in this province were individuals, but in their individualism they co-operated," Miss Macphail said. "They did a good deal of their own processing, and some of their other manufacturing. Or their neighbors in nearby towns did their manufacturing. They had a control over their own affairs that we haven't now. They had more self-respect."

"We have been robbed by the type of civilization in control over our own destiny. We rush hogs to Toronto, and bacon back for breakfast."

"Our self-respect can be restored only by producer and consumer co-operation. The day must come when everyone who tills the land will be a squarer."

"We need not only co-operation but also sympathetic government action at the same time."

"In Denmark they have improved more than the economic side of life. You pay only 25 cents a day for hospital care including surgical and medical attention. They have developed their musical, dramatic and speaking ability."

"We do not need to follow Danish methods. We can develop co-operation through our study groups. The development of character, the development of the ability of the individual is the greatest thing the co-operative movement does. The great thing is for people to get the feeling that they have control over their own destiny, that they count."

"Nobody can organize co-operatives for the producers. They must do it for themselves."

"A drop of $14 a ton in the price of fertilizer in the United States was brought about by cooperative distribution," said Mr.
Hull. "Co-operation brought down the price of gasoline also."

Urging the encouragement of consumer co-operation, to enable the public to buy more cheaply and to consume more of the farmers' products, Mr. Hull told of the success of the British cooperative retail stores.

"In Britain the consumer pays three and a half cents for a loaf of bread, half of what we pay out in Indiana beside the wheat fields," Mr. Hull said. "The British co-operative movement has cut the price of milk in two, and in addition has paid back to its members $6,000,000 in dividends."

"The love of money is the root of all evil when it becomes greater than the love of your fellow man," Mr. Hull declared.
"The fellow who said that follow-

REV. CHAS. REED DIES

Rev. Charles Reed, who was to preach at the Free Methodist church on Sunday, died at the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs.
George Reed, Orillia, on the Friday previously. Mr. Reed was of the Southern California conference of the Free Methodist Church and had been visiting friends and relatives in Ontario for the summer.

Mr. Reed was born in England, but at the age of two or three he moved, with his parents, to Bel-haven, where he was brought up.
He served in the last Ontario conference for some years. Following service in the Genesee conference, he was transferred to southern California.

Mr. Reed was well known in the district. His wife is the former Victoria Prosser of Kes-wick, and last summer he preached several times at the church here. He was a cousin by marriage of Mrs. Robert Graves and of T. Mann.

Mrs. Reed was still at their home in Los Angeles, but was to join him here a little later in the summer. Two daughters also survive.

Death was due to heart failure and congestion of the lungs.
Burial was made in California.

ed it up with the statement to love your neighbor as yourself."
Nora Calhoun and Gracie Davis of Aurora gave several exhibitions of dancing, and were accompanied by Bus Heisey, Aurora.
Six or seven hundred people attended the rally, a large number not gaining admittance to the auditorium. A loudspeaker carried the speeches to the overflow audience.

Tax Rate Too Low, Declares Evans, Town Short Of Funds

a right to be critical of such an expenditure."

"Why weren't you here when we struck the tax rate?" Councillor Arthur Evans demanded.

"We struck the tax rate at enough to run the town," replied
Dr. Dales.

"We said that we would give a civic welcome," Councillor W. W.
Osborne reminded the council.
"These bowlers are industrialists," said Dr. Boyd. "Their visit may be of value to the town."

On Dr. Dales' suggestion a council committee was authorized to spend a sum not exceeding $60 in entertainment of the bowlers.

The town will spread oil on stagnant water within the corporation, it was decided.

"They had to stop a softball game at Orillia the other night on account of mosquitoes," said Dr. Dales. Householders should spray their cellars, as mosquitoes breed in damp corners, Dr. Dales said.

The assessment of Miss Josephine Sykes at 155 Main St. was confirmed at $2,600, the amount on her assessment notice, although the amount was $2,700 on the assessment roll.

The council consented to the removal of one log from the No.
3 locks (a mile north of the town, near Stanley Osborne's place) in the Newmarket canal to collect sewage away and to enable J. B. Aylward, Queensville, to salvage a large quantity of concrete blocks. Purchased from the Dominion government, the blocks are lying at the bottom of the canal.

"I think if all the logs were taken out, it would be beneficial to Newmarket, because the current would be strong enough to wash away the sewage," said Mr.
Aylward.

"Why have we anything to do with it?" asked Mr. Mathews.

"The Dominion department of transport is afraid that there might be a kick," said Mr. Aylward.

"We might get a kick from Holland Landing," suggested Dr.
Dales.

"No, they would prefer to have the stream narrow instead of flooding their flats," said Mr.
Aylward.

A resolution from the Lions club urging the council's support of the "central Ontario highway" between Orangeville and Peterboro was received. The council passed a resolution asking the provincial government to make a decision on the proposed highway.

Councillors George Williams and A. V. Higginson brought in a resolution calling for the preparation of a bylaw for town collection and control of garbage. It was stated that the new system is likely to be started at the beginning of next year.

Councillor W. W. Osborne raised the question whether the town is under an obligation to erect poles to carry electricity to the new house of W. H. Curtis on the former Riley property behind the Christian church.

"The lane between the Christian church and Dr. L. W. Dales' property, leading to the Curtis house, is a public lane, Mr. Osborne said.

"It was dedicated as a public lane," said Mr. Mathews. "But I don't think that has anything to do with it. There is a public lane behind my home, but I don't think I could expect the town to take poles to my garage."

"I think the lane belongs to the church," said Dr. Dales.

"It belongs to the town," Mr.
Mathews corrected. Mr. Mathews afterwards looked at a blueprint of the town, but stated that the lane was not shown there as a public lane.

Mrs. Laker appeared before the council to say that a sidewalk on Eagle St. is in a dangerous condition.

B. W. Redditt appeared regarding the entrance to his property on Millard Ave. The matter was referred to the public works committee.

A letter from the Imperial Oil Co. advised the council that the company would give part of its land on the corner of Huron and Main Sts. to enable the town to round out the corner.

According to Councillors W.
W. Osborne and Frank Robinson, this improvement, including moving a hydrant, would cost $500.

"We can't afford it," said Dr.
Dales. "We haven't money to spend on Eagle St. So we can't do this."

"I'd like to see the improvement," said Dr. Boyd.

"It would improve the company's property as much as ours," said Mr. Osborne.

"Will they contribute?" asked
Dr. Boyd.

"No," said Mr. Osborne.

"If we make the improvement, their assessment goes up, and we get repaid," said Dr. Boyd.

men have made no decision."

"I understand that if the pool were built in the park, it would become a Lions club responsibility," said A. C. West. "I would be opposed to that."

"I doubt if a swimming-pool is feasible now," said J. O. Little.
"There is not enough water available from the town water supply, and the cost of purifying the water from the town pond is too great."

"I hope to have a successful year," said Mr. Bosworth in accepting the presidency. "I hope at the end of my term of office that my pet (Lions club park) that I have cherished for 25 years will be an established fact."

Mr. Bosworth made a gift to the club's children's fund of his expenses to the "Show Boat" convention as one of the six delegates representing the club.

NEW COURTROOM

"The court will meet once a week, even if needed," Mr. Mathews said. "The inspector stated that this room would do for the present. The court will grow.
For instance, there will be dog license cases. The reason there haven't been before is that there was no court."

"P. W. Pearson is a J.P., and used to receive a fee of $100 a year. The former attorney-general changed the fee to a share in the fine in case of convictions.
Seventy people sometimes visit his home within two or three weeks, and he receives only $2 or $3 for it. He has done it out of the goodness of his heart. I would suggest the appointment of Mr.
Pearson as court clerk, the salary to be left in abeyance until it is seen what work there is. It might be about $150 a year."

Mr. Mathews said that the court would prove profitable to the town.

The council appointed Mr.
Pearson.

"Can anything be done about stealing money out of milk bottles on the east side of town?"
asked Councillor W. H. Dixon.

"People have no right to tempt others by leaving money in milk bottles," said Mayor Dr. S. J.
Boyd.

"They should buy tickets," said Councillor W. W. Osborne.

"More cases for the police court," suggested Mr. Mathews.

Mr. Mathews and Morgan
Baker, M.L.A., were congratulated on their success in getting the police court for the town.

hit brought him to second base.
Both came in on Eves' batting, to make the score 4-1 at the end of the second.

Aurora went scoreless in the third, while a homer from Gibney and a nice hit by Neff added two runs to the Reds' margin.
The visitors rallied nicely in the fourth, however, and Heaney, White and Sparks crossed the home plate. In both the fourth and fifth innings the Redmen fell under the spell of the slow ball of the Aurora hurler.

Cunningham and Burkholder chalked up two for the Reds in the sixth and Aurora talked back with two counters by Heaney and Rawlings in the seventh. Counters by Peewee Hilton, Smith and Peters in the last of the seventh made the score 11-6 for the Redmen.

FLOWERS AT HER FEET

CHAPTER 46

KATHLEEN stood for a long time in Mrs. Anderson's kitchen staring at Alix's mail, at the English postmarks a year-and-a-half old, at the character in the handwriting, at the precise sameness in every letter of the chirography. Everything indicated a man who wouldn't make his decisions lightly, a man who knew his mind.

The two letters sent from England had been posted in April. The two in the same handwriting sent in May. An April and May almost two years gone!

Kathleen hesitated a moment, then: "Do you remember me?" she asked Mrs. Anderson.

"That I do, Shure, you're a friend of Miss Carey's, ain't you?"

"A very good friend, I hope," Kathleen said. "Mrs. Anderson, Miss Carey has just returned to New York. She isn't very well. I wonder if you'd trust me to take these letters to her?"

"Certainly. And will you be rememberin' me to her? And tell her I'm still wearin' the lovely things she gave me before she went away."

Kathleen stuffed the letters along with the ones she had mailed to Alix into her bag and hailed a taxi.

"Take me to Reymburn and Goodie's," she said to the driver. It would probably take her the rest of the afternoon she reflected at this was the day before Christmas. She had packages to tie up, four guests coming to dinner, a number of last minute things Kim would want done.

Well, those things could wait! She had a duty, a debt to pay. She owed everything she had to a girl she loved. Kathleen blinked away a tear that blinded her.

Kathleen drew herself up to her last inch, called upon every atom of command she had in her as she approached the secretary at the door of the office of Mr. Milton Reymburn, president of Reymburn and Goodie's.

She scribbled across her card which read: MRS. KIMBALL FOSTER PRESTON

The scribbled message said, "Will Mr. Reymburn receive Mrs. Preston as a personal favor?"

She waited five minutes. Five minutes while Mr. Reymburn remembered who Mrs. Kimball Foster Preston was.

He came to the door in person. "With great pleasure," he said. "Twenty minutes later Kathleen, with the information that Alix Carey's address was the Y.W.C.A. on Lexington Ave., gave her hand graciously to Mr. Reymburn and said, 'Thank you so much, Mr. Reymburn. I hope you'll forgive me for coming to you on such an important day. The day before Christmas must be frantic in such a successful store as this. I wish you a Merry Christmas.'"

Twenty blocks away Alix Carey was saying, "I hope you'll forgive me, Mr. Towner, for coming to you this day before Christmas. But you see, I was so afraid someone else might get the job, I couldn't wait."

"I'm glad you came," he said. "And I think Howard is a lucky fellow to get someone with your experience. Of course, the salary isn't very big but that's all he can pay now. Perhaps if you can put into effect some of the things you've tried in Bardsdale, together you can make a great success of it. Good luck."

"Good luck to you too, Mr. Towner. Thank you for making this a very happy Christmas for me."

Then, as darkness fell, she returned to the Y.

"Oh, Miss Carey!" the desk clerk called Alix as she crossed the lobby on her way to her room. "There's some mail for you."

Alix appeared surprised. "Is it a package. Do you want the elevator boy to take it up?"

"There was a big package sent to a Bardsdale postmark. She looked at it the way a child looks through the window of a toy shop."

"Yes," she said unbelievably, "it is true . . . oh . . . Merry Christmas to you."

"It is a very happy one," she said convincingly to the clerk who wondered what was the matter with Miss Carey and almost forgot to tell her there was a lady waiting for her in the lounge.

"Send up the package," Alix said and went into the lounge.

"Alix Carey, you're a very bad child!" Kathleen greeted her.

"I know I am," Alix said with a preliminary. "Now I can tell you why. I couldn't call you when I was working, Kathleen, and then I lost my job and I didn't want you to know but now I have the most wonderful chance I'm going into a small decorating shop and I'm going to get $30 a week. And I have a box upstairs from Bardsdale. Oh, don't mind me. It seems to spin over. It's because I'm happy! And happy because you are here, too."

"Suppose we go up and see what's in the box?" Kathleen said matter-of-factly. This was no place to give Alix the letters, not in the condition she was in.

"Let's open the package first and talk later about this fine new job," Kathleen composed herself to take her time. Kim would be frantic about her tardy return.

"Kathleen, do you mind if I keep it until tomorrow?"

"Of course not. That reminds me, Kim and I want you to come to us tomorrow at two. And we'll take no refusals!"

"All right." The color came back to Alix. The light returned to her eyes. She looked so happy it made the muscles in Kathleen's throat tighten.

"Oh, yes," Kathleen opened her bag as though she had just remembered the letters, "you know I was afraid the reason I didn't hear from you was because you were hurt by my silence."

"But I wasn't," Alix denied. "You said you wrote to me so I know that you did."

"Well, sometimes I'm a funny girl and I got to thinking maybe you didn't and so I happened to be in the neighborhood of your old apartment today and I dropped by. I also remembered how the mail was left loosely on that downstairs table. There was a chance that the letters had been saved by the ever-hopeful Mrs. Anderson."

"And?"

"And they were!" Kathleen said triumphantly.

She took the packet from her spacious bag and laid them on Alix's bed.

It was Christmas Eve.

"Are all those mine?"

"All of them," Kathleen dropped the lot so that the writing on the envelopes was face downward. She wanted to give Alix privacy when she saw them.

"Some of these are nearly two years old which goes to prove that a gift in time to the janitor's wife saves letters for years."

Alix didn't touch them. "Good heavens! It's nearly six. If I don't rush, my dear impatient husband will probably beat the daylight out of me."

"Kim?" Alix laughed merrily. The sound of her laughter was unexpected.

"I'll be so glad to see him again. That is . . . if he's . . ."

"Of course he is . . . You mean if he finally opened his eyes to the act you put on for our benefit, you noble girl! He's just as anxious to have you as I am. So put on your prettiest frock and don't be a minute late. I . . . I have an idea this is going to be a very happy Christmas for you, Alix." Her eyes strayed to the letters on the bed.

"It is already," Alix said. "Kathleen, I had thought that I was going to be alone tomorrow, jobless, forgotten. Instead I have my old friends back, my dear friends in Bardsdale have not forgotten me, and I have a wonderful job to look forward to. I'm really happy."

"Then I'll leave you. You look as though you needed a good dinner and an early-to-bed night and mind you, be prompt!"

Alix saw her to the door. Then she went back and gathered up the letters without looking at them and put them in her bureau drawer to save for the next day.

It was Christmas Eve and she had a box of presents to open. Sitting cross-legged on her bed, she opened the big box and took each gift out separately to savor every moment.

CHAPTER 47

"I MIGHT be a boarding school girl if I weren't an old maid," Alix reflected happily when she opened the package from Miss Lizzie in the Christmas box from Bardsdale and found a jar of preserves, a box of cookies and a fruit cake.

She nibbled a cookie before she opened Mae Alexander's box containing a hand-knitted sweater wrapped around a generous bottle of her favorite perfume. There was a note with it.

"We're all thinking of you, darling Alix," Mae wrote, "and knowing that you are having a wonderful success in New York. The sweater is my poor offering. I made it myself and you'll probably find it full of holes but that's the way my life feels since you went away. The perfume is from Bill with a heartfelt love," she says. "Things are working out here as you hoped and we are all anxious to hear about your good luck because we know you must have it."

"Well, I'm not doing so badly now," Alix reflected. She broke off a piece of the fruit cake, tried on the pink sweater and touched the stopper of the perfume vial back of each ear.

"I might as well make a night of it," she said to the girl in the mirror and took the letters from the drawer.

Rapidly she ran over them. Then she saw the four letters in the heavy square envelopes. The English postmark.

Letters from John Sayre. Very slowly, very carefully she separated them and laid them aside until she had read the others.

She forced herself to read Kathleen's long letters slowly, keeping until the last possible moment, those letters in the other envelopes. She read about the West Indies, paeons of praise about Kim, gay anecdotes of the adventures her friends had shared, descriptions of Mexico. Kathleen had found Mexico just as Kim had described it to Alix so long ago.

Yet long ago as it was it was after those other letters — from England — had been written.

dinner table at Kim's right.

After dinner they went to the drawing room and bade her look for her gift on the tree.

There was music in the afternoon. Kathleen got out her guitar and played an accompaniment while they sang popular songs.

Kim played the piano and they gathered around to sing Christmas carols.

"Let's have a performance party," Kathleen said. "Christmas is a day we're supposed to act like children. Each of us must do something special. Shall we?"

"But there isn't anything I can do," Alix said.

"There certainly is and I have the very costume. Come along, Alix, and I'll remind you of it."

Alix was caught in the spirit of it.

Remember that Mother Goose costume I had for the Jenkins' kiddie party? It'll be a little large for you, darling, but what of it," Kathleen said and dug in a chest.

"But what will I do?" Alix asked.

"Sing the Mother Goose songs you used to sing for Kim and me long ago."

"Oh, those! I'm not sure I remember them." But how could she forget the little songs her own mother had written for her long ago? Finkling little melodies put to the words of the Mother Goose rhymes.

"But I'll try," she said. Kathleen had taught her to accompany herself on the guitar.

Alix's voice was husky, low and sweet and she sang them over and over again.

Kim did sketch with Kathleen of old-time vaudeville dances. Helen Preston gave her impression of a flustered lady trying to outwit customs. Even Kathleen's father rose to the occasion and auctioned off the sugar canes on the Christmas tree.

The party was over at midnight.

"Kim, drive your mother home and come back for Alix. I want to keep her with me for a few minutes."

When they were alone, Kathleen put whatever reticence she had aside.

"Alix, forgive me for probing but I know all about the letters. Will you tell me about them?"

For an answer Alix took them from her bag and handed them to Kathleen silently.

Kathleen read them through slowly and gave them back to her.

"He loves you, Alix. He tried to tell you that he wanted to come back and tell you he did."

"No, he didn't, Kathleen. He was trying to apologize."

"If he believed that you loved another man, he would have no reason to apologize for trifling with your affections. You're being stubborn. It's as plain as can be that he wanted to tell you he loved you. You've got to find him."

"Even if I found him, what could I say? Men don't love that long, Kathleen. I've found that out."

"Oh, my poor blind darling! You don't know that man. He isn't the kind who would love a little while. Don't you know that you need him and that he needs you? Every man needs the woman he loves."

"It's too late now," Alix said with a tone of finality.

Kathleen didn't press her. Kathleen had another idea.

CHAPTER 48

"KIM, YOU'RE insane. You can put French blue and cardinal red together in a woman's costume but you simply can't do it in a room," Alix said heatedly.

"Oh, the gal is doing her stuff. Remember, I knew you when Young woman, I'm a living authority on sundry and such . . ."

"Alix is right," Kathleen said calmly from her desk. "She's proven herself a capable decorator and is proving it again so she must know what she's doing. Does it seem possible that this is nearly the end of February, Alix? And you've been at our new job nearly two months?"

"No, nothing seems quite real any more. Here, in this same room where I have spent so much time, from which I was so long absent, some things seem as though they've never changed and other things . . . I've drifted off and she lay back in the deep pillows of the lounge and gazed at the ceiling, seeing things her friends could never see."

"You're the same old girl, Alix, only you've grown up," Kim bent over a large book in which he was pasting clippings.

"Do you really think so?" Alix inquired idly.

"You used to be a little dreamy girl. Now you're a woman."

"Do you mean my gray hairs?" she asked amused.

"If you've got any gray hairs, I'd like to know where," Kathleen retorted.

"You don't look any different, or seem any different, than you did two years ago," Alix said, weaving a braid out of the fringe of a pillow.

"Neither do you, Alix," Kathleen said, trying to catch the eye of her husband. "Oh, before I forget—we've got a new beau for you who is coming in late Saturday. Alix, he's a mining engineer and . . ."

"No dates for Sunday, Kathleen. I've promised Howard that I'd drive out to Greenwich with him. He's going to do a house out there and this is the only chance we'll have to spend a lot of time looking the place over together."

"In any day," Kathleen said with the experienced tone of a middle-aged wife, "no business was as important as meeting a very important new beau."

"Important to whom?" Alix asked disinterestedly. Kathleen gave up. It was no good. She and Kim had dug up every eligible man they'd known in their lifetime to introduce to Alix. Alix had been charming and interesting but not interested.

Kim exclaimed: "That's what she needs. A new beau!"

"Do you really think that's my trouble?" Alix asked amused.

"Yes, that's the very thing. Kathleen said what you needed was lots of cream and sunshine to perk you up but I . . ."

"Kim!" Kathleen shot him a look of warning. "Weren't you supposed to telephone Ned before five? It's after 10 now. Run along. I want to make sure he has tickets for the Ballet. Please call him now!"

"What did I do?" Kim inquired innocently when he and Kathleen were alone that night.

"What did you do? My darling," his wife retorted pleasantly, "have you lost your finesse since you've been married?"

"All I said was that what she needed was a beau. And you'd been promoting one so I don't see . . ."

"I know that you don't see so I guess I'll have to turn a light on. But first I'll tell you where you erred. You intimated that she wasn't looking so well with your untimely reference to sunshine and cream. Alix doesn't look well. She's so fragile, she's almost transparent."

"Why should she be? She isn't working too hard, is she?"

"No, darling, she's thinking too hard. Or trying too hard not to think, burning up inside. She must be conscious of it and there's no need to make it any plainer. She's having heart trouble and not the kind a doctor can cure."

"You women and your romances!"

"It's lucky for you, Kim, that I don't want more romance. You never did understand Alix and I don't expect you ever will."

"Well, if she's crazy about this man why doesn't she do something about it?"

"Maybe she's waiting for leap year," Kathleen retorted.

"Why

Attended Bogarttown School Operates Fleet Of 50 Ships

"He was born in Newmarket." This distinguishing statement marks an article in the June issue of Maclean's Magazine on Harvey R. MacMillan, Vancouver, "boss of a timber empire", in that magazine's "leaders of business series." The article is written by Charles L. Shaw.

Mr. MacMillan should know best where he was born, and probably Newmarket was the birthplace of such a distinguished man. Inquiries made by The Era, however, brought out the following information, which may not be entirely accurate.

The son of Alfred MacMillan, the lumber magnate was born on a farm east of Aurora, and attended school just outside Newmarket at Bogarttown school (school section three, Whitechurch) which was located on the corner of the farm of his grandfather, John MacMillan, with whom he lived while going to school.

His mother was Josephine Wilson before her marriage and the Alfred MacMillan family lived on the Wilson farm, east of Aurora. His paternal grandmother, Mrs. John MacMillan, was also a Wilson (probably "Willson") although of a different family. (John MacMillan's second wife was Annie Powell).

The Wilson home was on Lot 32, Con. 4, Whitechurch, now owned by Johnson Bros.

One of Harvey Reginald MacMillan's teachers at Bogarttown school would be Miss Sadie Elizabeth Cameron. Among his schoolmates would be George Drury, Elmer Starr, Mrs. Esther Starr Hawtin, Mrs. Wesley Williams (formerly Midge Simpson).

Maclean's interesting account of Mr. MacMillan's career is given herewith:

Less than thirty years ago a frail youth fighting for his life in a sanitarium; twenty-five years ago a government official cruising the British Columbia forests; today one of the half dozen outstanding business leaders of the Canadian West—boss of a timber empire, operator of sawmills and logging camps, bank director, head of the biggest fish-packing organization in British Columbia, and operator of a fleet of more than half a hundred chartered ships plying the trade lanes of the world.

There are three mileposts marking the dramatic career of Harvey Reginald MacMillan—a romance of industry and commerce; a dream story that came true. MacMillan's career has been symbolic of the West—rugged, aggressive, courageous, and an ideal example of the sort of achievement that sometimes rewards the man who knows exactly what he wants and goes after it with ruthless determination and complete self-confidence.

In his early fifties, big, broad-shouldered, bushy-browed, MacMillan is still regarded as one of Vancouver's younger business-men, although probably no other individual in British Columbia has such a diversity of large-scale industrial interests. The spectacular element in MacMillan's rise to power has been speed. His whole business career has been crowded into barely twenty spirited, progressive years.

MacMillan says that much of the philosophy that was to guide him in later years was derived from contemplation while he lay in a sickbed, desperately ill, for more than a year at Saranac Lake in the Adirondacks and later at Ste. Agathe, Quebec. He had been, at the age of twenty-three, a victim of overwork. He was always a restless self-driver, but at school knowledge came easily to him. His record at Toronto schools—where he was born in Newmarket—and at the University of Toronto and Ontario Agricultural College was an enviable one. When he took post-graduate honors at Yale, because no Canadian university then boasted of a forestry course, Dean H. S. Graves, later to become chief of the United States Forest Service, called MacMillan one of his most brilliant students. In the Ontario government service and in the forestry branch of the Department of the Interior, young MacMillan set himself a terrific pace. When pulled down by illness he applied his will to recovery.

Forests and the economic wealth they represented were almost a passion with MacMillan from his earliest years. When the late Billy Ross, British Columbia's Minister of Lands, went scouting for a man to organize and direct a forest department in that province, and Dean Graves unhesitatingly recommended MacMillan, the young Ontario forester regarded the job as the opportunity of a lifetime. MacMillan tackled the assignment with an enthusiasm which he imparted to the able staff he gathered around him. It was a pioneering task, with few precedents to guide him, but in three years MacMillan built the framework of an organization that has managed Canada's greatest and richest forest area ever since.

But for all his academic capacity, MacMillan's organizing genius, his shrewd judgment of material values and talent for handling men, marked him inevitably for a business career. Even when the government sent him on a world tour to study lumber markets, his colleagues knew he was already lost to the Civil Service. Few were surprised when in 1915 he quit his job as chief forester and joined the veteran lumberman, E. J. Palmer, in the management of Vancouver Island's sawmill. But the technical end of lumber production never appealed to him as much as the glamor of foreign trade, which was to take him by train, ship and airplane to many a strange and distant land. MacMillan saw in lumber British Columbia's great bid for recognition in the markets of the world, if supported by smart merchandising and forceful salesmanship.

In 1919 MacMillan organized H. R. MacMillan Export company. From its inception the company was a factor to be reckoned with in British Columbia's biggest and most keenly competitive industry. At first MacMillan was little more than an agent for sawmills desiring an export outlet. The mill provided the lumber and MacMillan found the market—in China or Japan, the British Isles or Australia. He booked cargo space and took his commission. Then he chartered ships. He organized the Canadian Transport Company with a fleet of British vessels, and operated under subsidy or otherwise to the world's chief lumber markets.

When sawmill operators envied MacMillan's profits and went in to the shipping business themselves, MacMillan countered by buying sawmills and standing timber. He created his own cargo. Last fall he and his associates paid $4,000,000 for one of the biggest tidewater mills on the coast and a huge tract of timber on anconver land from John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

His entry into the salmon-packing industry was incidental to his growing foreign business. British Columbia Packers, Ltd., was a large salmon-packing organization, but weak financially. It was cumbersome and unworkable, operating many of its plants at a loss. MacMillan was asked to join the board as a sort of doctor to an ailing industrial patient. As president of B.C. Packers, MacMillan plugged the holes in its corporate structure, closed down unprofitable operations, drastically changed the financial setup. Early this year he was able to report to shareholders that B.C. Packers had a net profit.

MacMillan would apply to government the principles that have made for success in private enterprise. He regards high taxes as one of industry's most serious impediments and pleads for an enlightened governmental attitude toward capital investment, especially in the growing Western provinces, so dependent on primary production. Social legislation is all right, he thinks, so long as the country can afford it.

Just at the moment MacMillan's chief concern is Empire markets. No one is better qualified to appraise their advantage to Canada, and he wonders sometimes if Canadians as a whole realize the duty which they impose. "If we don't buy from the people who buy from us and contribute to the defense of the Empire from which we live, what can we expect?" he asks. "We cannot hope to live in the privileged position of preferential markets, as at present, if we don't try to make ourselves more valuable to the Empire which is invaluable to us."

Aurora Man's Hat Is Off To Duke Who Wed For Love

By J. R. Harrison, Aurora

The recent constitutional crisis called forth varying opinions as to the action of the late King Edward the Eighth in abdicating his throne rather than desert the woman he loved and who loved him. In the first place, probably few of the critics know the Duchess of Windsor better than the duke himself, so possibly his judgment as to her worth may be better than hers, but even if their judgment of her was more correct than his it misses the main point.

Most of the adverse criticism has been based on a misunderstanding of the true nature of love. So many people demonstrated this misunderstanding by exclaiming, "Why did not he choose anybody but Mrs. Simpson?" as if a man could choose to love or not to love anybody any more than one man could choose to like jazz and another classical music.

Love does not spring from logical or cold calculating reason, but is just a fact in nature which cannot be explained on a rational basis. Again we do not love people for their virtues but for the woman's reason, "Just because."

The depth and value of love must be judged by the sacrifice it calls forth and not by the worthiness of the object loved. We could not condemn the love of a mother for her wayward son and consider it less valuable than her love for her other son who might be a paragon of all the virtues, though it is true that if her love was not combined with reason and common sense it might not be sufficient to reform him.

Did the "friend of publicans and sinners" consider some not worthy of his love, or rather the greater need the greater the love? The Pharisees and high priests may say that he not only lost his throne but also endangered his soul through his act of self-sacrifice, but in reality he found it.

He lost the name of king, but proved himself a king among men for a that. I care little for hereditary titles and nobility, but my hat is off to you, Edward, Duke of Windsor—Edward with the big soul, whose motto is: "What I must do is all that concerns me, not what the people think." Finally he that is without sin let him cast the first stone.

In a Line-Up you are Courteous—
Try Courtesy
in the Traffic Lines

YOU, like most people, are courteous when you line up at the ticket to buy tickets. You stay in your place, do not jostle your neighbour, you respect his rights, and otherwise act towards him in a courteous manner.

But do you think and act towards your fellow-motorist in this same kind and courteous manner when you get behind the wheel of your car and roll along the highway?

Do you sound your horn when about to overtake him and then pass at a safe distance?

Do you keep to the right so that others may safely pass you?

Do you hand signal when you are about to stop, start, slow down or change direction?

Do you drive at the speed of the traffic you are in so as not to impede other drivers and cause them to "cut-in"?

When you need to sound your horn do you do so in a friendly manner or do you give it a frightening blast?

If you have not tried these courteous driving manners, I earnestly suggest that you try Courtesy when you get behind the wheel of your car or truck.

To "Try Courtesy" is to add greatly to your own pleasure and safety in driving as well as to that of your fellow motorist.

Sold—14,000 miles from home

It's a long way from any dairy farm in Canada to Chiangmai, Siam.

By railroad and steamer and pack train the distance is more than 14,000 miles. Yet products from Canadian dairy farms are used in Siam. Each year millions of pounds are bought and used in remote places throughout the world.

In 1937 Gail Borden's "condensed" milk first opened the way for world-wide selling of dairy products. Foreign outlets for Canadian milk are the result of modern sales and research pioneering.

Every million pounds of milk produced that finds a market in foreign lands, further supports the flow of milk money back to the farms of Canada.

HAD RHEUMATIC PAINS FOR 25 YEARS

His Arms Were Becoming Useless

It was about 25 years ago that rheumatism first marked down this sufferer; and finally the day came when he could hardly lift his arms. But he found relief here in this letter he tells the whole story—

"About 25 years ago I first experienced slight muscular rheumatism in my arm and shoulder. A few years later lumbago also attacked me. They gradually got worse until the pain got acute in both arms and loins. I could not lift a jugful of water with my arm extended straight out. About 12 months ago I bought a bottle of Kruschen Salts and by the time it was finished I was agreeably surprised at a slight improvement. I bought another one, and when that was finished all the pain had disappeared, and has never appeared since."—T.R.

The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are frequently caused by deposits of uric acid in the muscles and joints. The numerous salts in Kruschen assist in stimulating the internal organs to healthy, regular activity, and help them to eliminate this excess uric acid.

He complimented those present on the fine appearance of their farm homes along the highway.
